DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

3. Claims 1,3,4, and 9-27 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hausmann US 5,252,649.

Hausmann shows rubber compositions for tire tread members, see abstract. This patent further describes plasticizer constituents as being fatty acid triglyceride compounds which are >50% oleic acid triesters; see column 2, line 63 through column 3, line 65. The extraction of the oleic acid triesters from sunflower oil is discussed in the abstract as well as at column 3, line 52+. The diene elastomer is suggested at column 3, lines 38. The claimed mass fraction is suggested at column 3, line 55+.

Response to Arguments

Applicants' argue that the Hausmann patent teaches the use of rapeseed oil and that the rapeseed oil of the prior art has a lower amount of oleic acid than the 70% as claimed. This is not persuasive. The art is clear as to the optional selection of sunflower oil. The abstract identifies the sunflower oil as an alternative to rapeseed. The disclosure at column 4 lines 3+ suggests the combination of sunflower oil with the rapeseed oil. One of ordinary skill in the art is directed to use the sunflower oil. As such, the use is prima facie obvious. Applicants' fail to address the fact that the art specifically mentions the use of sunflower oil.

Applicants' then point out that the rapeseed oil is known to have a mass fraction of oleic acid of about 50%. The claims are limited to sunflower oil having a mass fraction of oleic acid of equal to or greater than 70%. This is not persuasive. The Hausmann disclosure does not limit the maximum mass fraction of the oleic acid in the sunflower or rapeseed oil. The disclosure identifies the lower amount of oleic acid as being greater than 50%. This renders obvious the claimed amount of oleic acid of equal to or greater than 70%. The sunflower oil is known to have a mass fraction of oleic acid upwards of 70% or greater.

The alleged unexpected results have been fully considered. The reported results fail to sufficiently rebut the prima facie case of obviousness. The results show that different compounds have different properties. This is expected. There is no unexpected result commensurate in scope with the claimed invention.
